| France | Baccon - The Chappe Tower | A dive into the telegraph era. As you explore the Chappe de Baccon Tower, you will immerse yourself in a time when technology was both rudimentary and revolutionary. Imagine yourself as a messenger from the past, admiring the surrounding panorama while discovering the secrets of this ancient method of long distance communication, imagined in 1794 by Claude Chappe. The Baccon Tower was built in 1823, on the Paris-Bayonne line, which was made up of 118 towers, spaced 8 to 10 km apart each. Where once the transmission of a message required four and a half days on horseback from Bordeaux to Paris, the Chappe telegraph accomplished this feat in just 40 minutes. Although the Chappe telegraph disappeared around 1850, the Baccon Tower remains, restored and transformed into a museum, offering visitors a captivating dive into the history of French communications.Visits to the Chappe Tower are offered free of charge by the Baccon Patrimoine association, the first Sunday of each month, from April to September from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. |

This unique geological site, known as "Trou de Bozouls", is a natural cirque, a horseshoe-shaped canyon dug into the limestone of the Causse Comtal. This deep meander is the result of the erosive action of water and the stages of entrenchment of the watercourses. Modest as it is now, it is the Dourdou which, for millennia, has shaped this astonishing natural curiosity. Classified as a Sensitive Natural Area, the canyon is home to natural habitats, remarkable fauna and flora. |
| France | Brouage - The citadel | Founded around 1555 by Jacques de Pons, on the deposit of ballast left by ships frequenting the Gulf of Saintonge for more than 1000 years. Brouage was, above all, intended to be a place of commerce. Babel, where all languages were spoken, rich and prosperous, the city became such a strategic issue that Protestants and Catholics fought over it until the King himself decided to incorporate it into his own domain. |

| France | Champaubert - Lac du Der Chantecoq | A true inland sea. Unprecedented in its design and in the history that marked its construction, Lac du Der is recognized as one of the largest lakes in Europe, an integral part of the Marne and Haut-Marne landscape. In 1974, after 10 years of gigantic work, the Lac du Der was born in the heart of Champagne. The lake is above all a reservoir designed to regulate the water levels of the Marne river which feeds the Seine. Essential for limiting floods and nourishing watercourses during low water periods, the Lac du Der offers you breathtaking landscapes throughout the seasons. |
| France | Charroux Abbey | Located on the Way of St. James, the building is known as a major center of medieval Christianity during the Carolingian era. Each year, between 20,000 and 30,000 pilgrims traveled there to pay their respects before its precious relic of the Cross of Christ, which has sadly since disappeared. Damaged numerous times during the Hundred Years' War, then ruined by the Wars of Religion, the abbey was finally demolished during the French Revolution. Among the remains of this unique sanctuary, don't miss the lantern tower, called the Charlemagne Tower, which was located at the heart of the abbey church. |
| France | Chateau de Lassay | Unlike most medieval fortresses, often abandoned or dismantled, or remodeled over time to become pleasure residences, Lassay Castle has survived the centuries without notable modifications. It is therefore an exceptional example of military architecture from the 15th century, homogeneous and still intact. Its history is that of a stronghold located on the borders of three provinces: Maine, Brittany, Normandy. As a result, Lassay was the subject of numerous fiercely contested sieges in the 15th century during the English invasion, then the Breton wars and in the 16th century during the wars of religion. Its unique silhouette, with its eight towers connected by a rampart and its barbican, is forever imprinted in the imagination of those who saw it – Victor Hugo, struck by this silhouette, made a famous drawing of it. |
| France | Château des Allymes | Perched on the first foothills of the Bugey mountains, the Château des Allymes has dominated the Ain plain for seven centuries. It takes the form of a vast citadel enclosed by an enclosure that sheltered a small village within its walls. Access to the centre is free of charge. |
| France | Compiègne - The Armistice Clearing Memorial | The Armistice Clearing Memorial was inaugurated on 11 November 1922. At the time, the memorial comprised the Sacred Slab and the Alsace-Lorraine Monument. Later, the clearing would also welcome the museum housing the carriage and then the Marshal Foch statue. Numerous monuments are installed within the Rethondes Clearing, honouring the victims and heroes of the Great War. Come discover them during a digestive stroll about the landscaped grounds. |
| France | Concarneau - The Citadel | Small islet nesled in a cove, the Citadel of Concarneau is dated from 11th century and is the place of birth of the city. The “Ville Close” is surrounded by granite remparts and has nine towers and three gates. Its narrow streets still show the oldest dwellings of the city: half-timbered and gabled houses, or even chapel converted into living spaces… Having become too small, the city soon spread on the nearby shore. Today, the only pedestrian access is the old drawbridge, but visitors can also choose to reach the citadel using the little ferry which connects the Ville Close to the “Passage”, a former fishing district. |
| France | Corsica - Viergo pass | On the road to Corte and deep Corsica, this pass is the border between Haute-Corse and Southern Corsica. It is the highest on the island. It actually culminates at 1478 meters on a ridge between Puna de Cricche (2507 meters), Monte Cinto (2706 meters) and Capu a Rughia (1712 meters). It is accessed by a winding road which crosses the forest. On both sides of the pass there are vast forests, however, its windswept summit is bare apart from the imposing sculpture of Christ the King which stands there. The absence of vegetation offers superb view bridges over the surrounding reliefs. This pass is the starting point for numerous hikes through the Corsican mountains to discover sumptuous and preserved landscapes. |
| France | Corte | Formerly the capital of independent Corsica, its only citadel, located inland, stands out like a figurehead. Its location in the heart of the Corsican mountains gives Corte the colors of the entire island. Characterized by its old schist houses clinging to the rock, Corte distinguishes its upper, historical and cultural part from its lower, commercial part structured around winding and steep streets. |

| France | Falaise - Medieval castle | The site of Falaise, situated on the edge of the first foothills of the Armorican massif, has been occupied by man since at least the Mesolithic Age (around 7000 BC). Different types of settlement succeeded one another over the centuries, and it seems that a fortification already exists on the rock in the Carolingian era. Taking advantage of this protection, the town develops on the rocky spur formed by the two valleys of the Ante and Marescot rivers. The beginning of the 10th century saw the creation of the dukedom of Normandy (the land of the northmen) after the Viking chief Rollo was granted land by Charles III “the simple”, king of franks, in 911. In this new political scene, the town and castle develop and change greatly and Falaise was to become one of the first cities of the new duchy. |
| France | Galaxy of Standing Stones | Conceived in 2005 by the association "Les Lapidiales," the idea for the Galaxy of Standing Stones is to erect a field of 365 megaliths. | France | National Air and Space Museum of France | Located within airport Paris-Le Bourget, it's one of the world's finest aviation museums, both for the wealth of its collections and long history. It features an incredible collection of historical artefacts spanning the three branches of flight: ballooning, aviation and space. More than a hundred aircrafts are on display, from the very first flying machines to the Concorde. Le Bourget is also a place that all aviation heroes have been through, including Charles Lindbergh. It's the birthplace of commercial aviation and includes buildings that are themselves of great cultural interest, like the terminal building with its Art Deco architecture |
| France | Neuf-Brisach Fortified Town | Neuf-Brisach is the Citadel of the Sun King since it was founded in 1699 at Louis XIV's behest. Today, it is considered as Vauban's masterpiece. Its architecture is unique in Europe, and the Citadel is listed as part of the world Heritage by UNESCO. Its parade ground, pure lines, 48 quarters forming a perfect octagon and bastion fortifications make it unique in its kind. To make the most of your visit, follow the blue line for a tour of Vauban's work. A lovely stroll at the heart of history! |
| France | Noyers sur Serein - Mittle medieval town | Noyers-sur-Serein is a real-life history book. With the cobbled streets lined with half-timbered houses built on archways, you'll feel like you're on a historic film set. This picture-perfect place is only 2 hours away from Paris! Here, everything seems to have been frozen in time: village squares, churches, fortifications, sculpted capitals, and the peaceful banks of the river Serein.You can visit the village on foot, to really experience this remarkably well-preserved medieval village where trade once flourished. Add to that the beautiful Renaissance-style residences and you have a superb concentration of Burgundian architecture, listed as one of the "Most Beautiful Villages in France". |
| France | Oradour sur Glane - Martyred village | The total annihilation of the village and its population, the merciless determination of the executioners, made Oradour-sur-Glane, from 1944, an archetype of massacres of civilian populations. On November 28, 1944, the Provisional Government took the decision to classify and conserve the ruins, thus attracting national recognition to Oradour. These measures establish the martyr village as a symbol of a France injured by the German occupation. During his visit in March 1945, General de Gaulle recalled "that a place like this remains something common to all, a thing where everyone recognizes the common misfortune, the common will and the common hope". We then witness a sanctuarization of the ruins where the signs invite the visitor, who has become a pilgrim, to reflect by entering what was a place of suffering and martyrdom. |

| France | Paimpont - Guillotin's oak | A remarkable tree and a symbol of protection. You will most certainly be surprised by its exceptional circumference (10 metres!) and its gigantic branches… Previously called Chêne des rues Éon, a tribute to Éon de l'Étoile, this remarkable tree located in Concoret is thought to be between 800 and 1,000 years old. It takes its name from Father Guillotin, a defiant priest who found shelter in the hollow of its trunk during the French Revolution. This version seems to have been inspired by another fact from the same period: a certain Joachim Masson, also a defiant priest, hid inside the oak tree to escape French revolutionaries. He was spared solely thanks to the spider web woven within a few hours across the hole in the tree… Some might read more into this, perhaps evidence of a higher power… Will you? |
